

San Diego Hebrew Day Summer Reading List

Summer is a time to rest, relax and gain perspective, yet it is also important that learning continue during break to ensure that skills are practiced and retained. The best way students can retain many of the skills learned during the school year is to read regularly over the summer. At Hebrew Day, we require summer reading for incoming third through eighth graders for this very reason.

The following is the required reading for the summer for grades 3-8. When students return from summer break and begin the new school year, English teachers will have assessment, projects or assignments based on the reading they were expected to do over the summer. We've chosen books that should be fun/interesting reads, easier reads, and most importantly reads that students can do on their own without much guidance.
